

Meet the Author

Jennifer DeBruin

Saturday March 24th @ 2:00 pm

“Forged in the flames of war.” Isolated on the frontier of colonial Deerfield, Massachusetts, Sarah yearns to know what lies beyond the distant hills – beyond her strict Puritan life. What she does not know is that her family lies dangerously exposed to those with ambitions to rid the land of the English. Lurking amidst the majestic beauty, their enemies, the French and their Native allies, await the opportunity to strike. Fiction Inspired by True Events .

About the author

With deep ancestral roots in SD&G, New France/Quebec, Upper Canada/Ontario, and colonial America, Jennifer is interested in exploring the human story within this rich history. Combining her passion and experience in writing, education, history, and genealogy, she has created diverse avenues to encourage others to “discover the humanity in the history.” An author of fact-based historical fiction novels, she also writes historical pieces, which have been featured in various publications .

She is currently writing her fourth novel, in addition to her ongoing research and writing projects. She is married with two children and lives in Eastern Ontario, Canada .

Free admission, donations to the Friends of the Library accepted

23 Buell St. | friends@brockvillelibrary.ca

Friends of the
BROCKVILLE
PUBLIC LIBRARY

